CHARACTER DETAILS

Background

Z-X3D (or "Ed") was memorized as Brentlaar after his former crew staged a bloody mutiny, murdering Captain Petrik in a plan to leave their affiliation with Carlisle behind, and pick up with the Zaxe Consortium. About 2 meters tall, humanoid. Originally a Z-X3 experimental droid trooper, after that project was scrapped, he fell into private hands. was passed around a lot, partially dismantled to claim the valuable armour plating and eventually sold off. Ended up working around with a gangster with Captain Petrik. A bit of a trickster, he modified Ed with concealed compartments in his torso and legs to act as smuggling compartments. Ed was also given a personality core, which is unusual for droids of his model. Ed's personality is a mixture of his original programming and a combination of the personalities of his various owners, including the mutineers. Ed's personality is generally self-aware and good-natured. Perhaps as a result of that, or just in emulation of his mentor, he's quite adept at at least trying to talk himself into or out of situations, but happy to resort to blaster-based negotiations when the mood strikes. No one can be with a storyteller face, but then it is made of metal. Sometimes learned to "shine", perhaps to integrate better into the crew. No one really knows where it goes, though his travels, seeing how it's been dismantled are traced, a vague remnant of a fragment of a memory of being repaired by the empire, and as a result of the mutiny. Ed takes his beloved captain, he has a distrust of organic life. Ed now dreams of reaching his own crew of emancipated droids to spread revolution across the galaxy (while making a tidy profit). For now he's doing odd bits of labour, security, and less honest means of turning a credit, while hanging around cantinas and spaces looking for opportunity to get off world with the right crew. Who he's definitely not going to murder in their sleep.
