CHARACTER DETAILS

Background

Z-X3ED (or "Ed") was marooned on Brentaal after his former crew staged a bloody mutiny, murdering Captain Planck in a plan to leave their affiliation with Car'das behind, and joint up with the Zaan Consortium. About 2 meters tall, humanoid. Originally a Z-X3 experimental droid trooper, after that project was scrapped, he fell into private hands, was passed around a bit, partially dismantled to claim the valuable armour plating he'd been created with, and eventually wound up as part of a bargain with Captain Planck. A bit of a tinkerer, he modified Ed with concealed compartments in his torso and legs to aid in smuggling small items in otherwise plain sight, an integrated comlink, datapad, slicing and lockpicking tools in his hands, and enhanced photoreceptors. Ed also underwent numerous reprogramming attempts to overwrite his Imperial roots, and improve his abilities at espionage and general skullduggery. Perhaps as a result of that, or just in emulation of his mentor, he's quite adept at at least trying to talk himself into or out of situations, but happy to resort to blaster-based negotiations when the need arises. No one can lie with a straighter face, but then it is made of metal. Somehow learned to "drink", perhaps to integrate better into the crew. No one really knows where it goes. Through his travels, seeing how his droid brethren are treated, a vague remnant of a fragment of a memory of being rejected by the empire, and as a result of the mutiny that killed his beloved captain, he has a distrust of organic life. Ed now dreams of leading his own crew of emancipated droids to spread revolution across the galaxy (while making a tidy profit). For now he's doing odd bits of labour, security, and less honest means of turning a credit, while hanging around cantinas and space ports looking for an opportunity to get off world with the right crew. Who he's definitely not going to murder in their sleep.
